Just before Ed and I moved to Los Angeles for a year, Bro Bob Nash gave this public talk. While we lived there, near Nashes, they were a great inspiration to us, including us in all their fellowship, gatherings and activities.

The young girl next to the bird bath is my sister Shirley.

I recognize Norma Mitchell, Gene Alice Fay Drevno, Thyra Hudgings, Ed Fay, Sr. Litwin, Michael Litwin, Laura Kelsey and Leon Norby.

The snapshot which is entitled 1940 is of Elsie Marten Peters, the Zahnows, and Elsie's older sister Elizabeth Gumboc. I was immersed with Elsie and her first husband (Ted, Sr.) and Elizabeth, in 1936. There were several other older brethren who had been consecrated but had not had an opportunity to symbolize their consecrations because there'd been no class except the JW's, to speak of. (There were a couple of tiny, exclusive classes that didn't hold immersions, both of which dissolved as their members died or came to our class when we left the JW's.)

“Maiden Voyage,” a picture of Bro. Carpenter, paralyzed, being carried from a convention by his son-in-law Harold Dawson. I don’t remember his ever attending a convention after that.

We all went over and visited him, and invariably we found “We went to be a blessing, but came away having received a greater blessing.”

Ted Hack, Albert Sheppelbaum, Vi Jurek, Shirley standing above, Nodie Morehouse, and Willie Ryba.

Bro. and Sr. P. L. Read were probably taken at conventions.

The Woodworths

Michael Litwin, Mary and Leo Post.

Cora Sundbom with my grandmother Carrie Bell.

Above is the long thin picture of Ted Marten, Sr., who died. He was Elsie Peters' first husband and father of Ted Marten.
